Brown orange

Dark brown

There were five printings of the 1847 5 cent stamp. The ink formula was changed and the plate cleaned after the third printing. While the color itself is not a guarantee of which printing the stamp came from, it is a good indicator.

'Brown' shades on the right tend to be from the first 3 printings. Shades on left with more orange tend to be from the last two printings or early in the first printing. These are guidelines, not definitive.
